PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

On the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each Chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

INTRODUCTION.

In chapter xxx. of Book iii., Higden concludes the history of Alexander the Great. The authorities mentioned are Petrus, Vincentius, and Trogus; but the story is in substance that given by the Pseudo-Callisthenes, and which, in Higden's time formed the chief portion of the popular romance of King Alysaunder, and was received as veracious. The chapter narrates the great king's visit to the talking trees of the sun and moon.[1] The trees (not the Chaldæan priests, as in Arrian) foretell the king's approaching death, if he will enter the city of Babylon. However, in his joy at receiving proposals of submission from many nations of the West, whose ambassadors were awaiting his arrival, he enters the city, and there is poisoned at a banquet at the house of Thessalus,[2] the physician. According to Higden it is Antipater, who sends his son Cassander from Macedonia, for the purpose of poisoning Alexander. The description of the quality of the poison does not agree either with Arrian or the Pseudo-Callisthenes, but appears to be made up from the Death of Alexander and division of his empire. Book iii. Cap. xxx.

[1] Pseudo - Callisthenes, iii. 17, gives the whole story in a letter which Alexander is supposed to have sent to Aristotle (to which circumstance Higden also alludes, p. 6), recounting this and many other marvels which had been seen by the King. The place near which the trees were is called ἡ Πρασιακὴ πόλις.

[2] Pseudo - Callisthenes, iii. 30, agreeing with Arrian, represents Medius as the giver of the banquet, but gives the story of the poisoning, which Arrian only mentions to reject as without foundation. No doubt the occurrence of Thessalus as the name of the giver of the feast is owing to negligent quotation from Trogus, who has "Medius Thessalus" (xii. 13.)

two.[1] The king, on drinking the poison, which was conveyed to Babylon in the hoof of a horse, groaned as though wounded with a knife,[2] and dies, leaving no arrangement for the succession. All that he was able to do was to mention that the most worthy man should succeed him, and to give his ring to Perdiccas. The moralizing reflections at the end of the chapter (xxx.), are not in Trogus, but bear a considerable resemblance to some verses which are put by Pseudo-Callisthenes into the mouth of Alexander on his death bed. Of the successors of Alexander mention is made of Ptolemy in Egypt, Seleucus[3] in Syria, Antigonus in Northern Asia, and Philip Aridæus in Macedonia. Of these the history follows first the fortunes of Ptolemy. The authority is Josephus (xii. 1.), and, as might be expected, we are told little more than of his seizure on Syria, and his capture of Jerusalem by attacking the Jews on the Sabbath day.

Egyptian history. Cap. XXXI.

The help which Ptolemy gave to Pyrrhus, afterwards the famous king of Epirus, towards the recovery of his kingdom, is also noticed. Of Ptolemy Philadelphus[4] it is related, without any authority being given and contrary to all that we know from other sources, that he warred with and overcame his father. The account of [1] Arrian says (vii. 27) in alluding to accounts which he does not believe, ὅι δὲ καὶ ὅτι ἐν ἡμιόνου ὁπλῇ ἐκόμισε καὶ τοῦτο ἀνέγραψαν. And Pseudo-Callisthenes (iii. 30.) καὶ τοῦτο διαλογιζόμενος (i.e. Antipater) ἐσκέυασε φάρμακον δηλητήριον ὃ οὐκ ἔφερεν ἀγγεῖον οὔτε χαλκοῦν οὔτε ὑάλινον, οὔτε κεράμιον, ἀλλ' εὐθέως ἐρρήγνυτο· ἐν μολιβδίνῃ οὖν πυξίδι βαλὼν τὸ φάρμακον ὁ Ἀντίπατρος καὶ περικαθάψας ἄλλῃ πυξίδι σιδηρᾷ ἔδω τῷ ἰδίῳ υἱῷ.

[2] Ps. Call. iii. 30. ὡς τόξῳ πεπληγὼς διὰ τοῦ ἥπατος. Here the poison is conveyed to the king by Iollas the cup-bearer, who is an accomplice in the plot.

[3] All the MSS. agree in writing the name as Seleucus Nicanor instead of Nicator, see p. 16.

[4] The orthography is always Philadelphius in the MSS.

his kindness to the Jews, which is quoted from Petrus, is also confirmed by Josephus.[1] The mission to Eleazar the high priest, to obtain a copy of the Jewish scriptures for the Alexandrine Library, is mentioned though without details. The opinions of Augustine and Jerome are cited upon the manner and time in which the LXX. version was completed. While on the subject of Greek versions of the Scriptures, Higden mentions those of Aquila, Symmachus, Theodotion, and the quinta[2] editio, as well as the Latin version made by Jerome. The matrimonial alliance between Ptolemy and Antiochus Theos, king of Syria, which put an end to the long war between these kings is mentioned, and also its disastrous consequences both to king Antiochus and his son by Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy. The authority for the history of Egypt, except in cases where the contrary is stated, is always Petrus Comestor.

Cap. XXXIII.

Ptolemy Euergetes, who is called in all the MSS., except those of the type to which C.D. belong,[3] frater and not filius of Ptolemy Philadelphus, is narrated to have avenged the murder of his sister Berenice, and her husband and child, by invading Syria and extending his conquests over a great part of Asia, but to have been recalled by the news of a revolt among the princes of Egypt.[4]

[1] Josephus, B.J., xii. 2.

[2] So called from the position which it occupied among the Greek translations in the columns of Origen's comparative arrangement of the versions ; for more information see Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, Articles, Versions, and Septuagint.

[3] The labour bestowed in forming the new class-catalogues of MSS. in the British Museum has shown that C.D. belong to the earliest type of the MSS. of Higden, and therefore we may often expect to find correctly in them what has been corrupted in the later types. The greater correctness of these MSS. had already been noticed more than once by Prof. Babington. See vol. i., p. 394.

[4] The Prince of Syria, whom he is said to have attacked, is named by

He was succeeded by his son Ptolemy Philopator, whose luxury and debauchery are mentioned on the authority of Trogus. His vicious life [1] and crimes induced Antiochus the Great to attack him, but he was defeated with great loss. On his death, his infant son Ptolemy Epiphanes succeeded to the throne, and the kingdom of Egypt was placed under the protection of the Romans. This was done because of the threatened inroads of the Macedonians and Syrians. The brief success and ultimate failure of Ptolemy's general Scopas against Antiochus III. is mentioned, and also the marriage of Ptolemy [2] to Cleopatra the daughter of that king. From Josephus is drawn the account of the double tribute said to have been demanded of the Jews at this time, by Antiochus, and also by Ptolemy, the tribute of Syria being claimed by both monarchs.[3] Onias the high priest, is said to have refused to pay the tribute to Egypt, and the ill consequences of such refusal were only prevented by the politic conduct of Joseph, the nephew of Onias. The mention of this Joseph leads to a digression (for which the authority is still Josephus) on the cleverness of Hyrcanus, Joseph's younger son, some portion of whose talent was displayed when he was sent by his father to congratulate the Egyptian king on the occasion of the birth of his son.

Cap. XXXIV.

Higden, Antiochus Galericus; but the succeeding passage (p. 46), shows that the person meant is Seleucus Callinicus, the father of Seleucus III. and Antiochus the Great.

[1] The meretrix to whose fate, as well as that of some others, Higden alludes, was Agathoclea, the sister of Ptolemy's profligate minister Agathocles.

[2] The text of Higden (p. 74), which says that Antiochus married Ptolemy's daughter, must be wrong, though the versions follow the Latin as it stands. Ptolemy at this time was six years old. The only wife of Antiochus the Great was Laodice, daughter of Mithridates IV., king of Pontus.

[3] Antiochus had promised it as part of his daughter's dower, but had not given it up.

Of Ptolemy Philometor the only notices are that in his reign a Jew named Aristobulus wrote for him a commentary[1] on the law of Moses, and that Antiochus Epiphanes gave his sister in marriage to Ptolemy, with a view to gain possession of Egypt, but was disliked by the Egyptians, and a stop put to his schemes by the interference of the Romans,[2] whose embassy caused Antiochus to desist from the siege of Alexandria. Ptolemy's alternate support of Alexander Balas, and then of Demetrius Soter in Syria, and his ultimate conquest of Asia are mentioned on the authority of Petrus, but without details.[3] The son of Ptolemy Philometor was proclaimed king after his father's death, under the title of Ptolemy Eupator, but this is unnoticed by Higden, who gives the name of Eupator as well as Philopator to the son[4] of Euergetes I. Cap. XXXV.

Of Ptolemy Euergetes II. all that is mentioned is the length of his reign, and very little more notice is given to Ptolemy Soter II. We are merely informed of his banishment to Cyprus through the influence of his mother, who wished her younger son Ptolemy Alexander to have the sovereignty ; and afterwards that when Alexander was driven from the throne for the murder of the mother who had placed him upon it, Soter II. was recalled and reigned eight years. Cap. XXXVII. Cap. XXXVIII. Cap. XXXIX.

[1] This commentary, which is alluded to by Clemens Alexandrinus (Strom. i. pp. 305, b ; 342, b, v, p ; 595, c, d;), and by Eusebius (Præp. Ev. vii. 13 ; viii. 9; ix. 6 ; xiii. 12) was designed to prove that most of the Gentile philosophy was derived from the law of Moses.

[2] The Marcus Publius of Higden's text (p. 110) is a confusion for C. Popillius Lœnas, who was the spokesman of the Roman ambassadors. Cf. Liv. xlv. 12.

[3] Alexander Balas pretended to be a son of Antiochus Epiphanes, and claimed the kingdom of Syria against Demetrius Soter. He was aided by Ptolemy Philometor, but repaid the aid by an attempt to murder his benefactor. This caused Ptolemy to use the army brought to help Alexander as a means of overthrowing him.

[4] See p. 50.

Cap. XL. The next king of Egypt whom Higden mentions is Ptolemy Dionysus,[1] better known as Auletes; but he only states the length of his reign. Of his daughter, the Cap. XLI. famous Cleopatra, somewhat more is said. She is stated to have reigned two years before Cæsar, five under Cæsar, and fifteen under Augustus. She shared the kingdom with her elder brother Ptolemy, who during his minority was under the protection of Rome. Pompey, fleeing to Egypt after his defeat in Thessaly, is killed, according to Higden, by the stratagems of Ptolemy.[2] On Cæsar's arrival in Egypt, the people of Alexandria entreat his pardon for Ptolemy, who soon requites the grant by a rebellion, in the end of which he perishes,[3] and Cæsar gives the kingdom to Cleopatra, by whose blandishments Cap. XLIII. he is fascinated. This queen is next mentioned as taking the part of Antonius against Octavianus, a notice of which Cap. XLIV. is repeated at the commencement of the next chapter, together with the story of their defeat and flight after the battle of Actium. A few sentences tell of the death of both Antony and Cleopatra, and the subjection of Egypt to the Romans.

The kingdom of Syria. The kings of Syria are slightly noticed, mainly where their history touches upon that of the Jews. There is Cap. XXX. first given a list of these kings, from Seleucus Nicator to Antiochus Epiphanes. Of the first, the only mention Cap. XXXI. made is of the colonies which he founded and called by the names of his father, his mother, and himself, and of the respect which he paid to the Jewish people. It was in his time that Simon the son of Onias was high-priest at Jerusalem, and was succeeded by his brother Eleazar.

[1] Called Dionysius in all the MSS. Of Ptolemy Alexander II., son of Ptolemy Alexander I., no notice is taken in the Chronicle.

[2] This rather appears to have been done by the contrivance of Pothinus an eunuch, in whose hands the young Ptolemy was, and who caused Pompey to be killed, hoping thereby to secure the favour of Cæsar. See Lucan, viii. 484, &c.

[3] He really was drowned in attempting to escape.

Of Antiochus Soter nothing is mentioned but the name. The war of his son Antiochus Theos with Ptolemy Philadelphus has been noticed under the affairs of Egypt. He was succeeded by Seleucus Callinicus, called in Higden Antiochus Galericus, who left two sons, Seleucus and Antiochus. The former was murdered by Nicanor,[1] one of his own officers, and was succeeded by his brother Antiochus, who is known as "the Great." His design of invading Egypt has already been noticed. It was this king who entered into a confederacy with Philip, King of Macedonia, to invade Egypt during the minority of Ptolemy Epiphanes, and who also conquered Scopas, Ptolemy's general, but in the end betrothed[2] to that king his daughter Cleopatra. At the end of the chapter his murder in the temple Navee in Persia is recorded.[3] Seleucus, the elder brother[4] and predecessor in the kingdom of Antiochus Epiphanes, is mentioned in the story of Hyrcanus, the son of Joseph, already alluded to. And it was through fear of his successor that Hyrcanus committed suicide. In the same chapter it is told how Antiochus Epiphanes was given as a hostage to the Romans.[5] The story of the mission of Heliodorus from Seleucus Philopator to plunder the temple at Jerusalem,

[1] Higden does not notice that he reigned, or by whom he was slain, merely saying, "Antiochus, occiso "fratre suo, regnavit."

[2] On p. 74, line 17, duxit, though in all the MSS., is a mistake. To be correct the sentence should run regressus dedit ei Cleopatram filiam suam in uxorem.

[3] This is the event foretold in Daniel, xi. 18, 19, that he should be overcome by the Romans, and die in "a fort of his own land."

[4] He is here (p. 84) called in one MS. Seleucus Soter, and the same title is given to him in the text (p. 102), though other authorities call him Seleucus (IV.) Philopator. Josephus calls him Soter (A. J. xii. 4, ad fin.).

is told on the authority of Petrus: but the statement that Josephus explained the two men[1] who slew Heliodorus to have been two angels is without foundation, as Josephus does not mention the occurrence at all.

This was the time when the book of Jesus, the son of Sirach, was written.[2]

Cap. XXXV. Antiochus Epiphanes escaped from Rome,[3] and reigned on his brother's death. He gave his sister to Ptolemy Epiphanes, with a view to the ultimate seizure of Egypt, but was prevented by the Romans from carrying his scheme into execution. It was on his return from this unsuccessful expedition into Egypt that he perpetrated such cruelties upon the Jews. During this period it was that Onias, the son of Simon, fled into Egypt, and being kindly received by Ptolemy, built Heliopolis.[4] There is a confusion in Higden's account between two persons called Onias, father and son. The father was the high priest whose brothers, Jesus and Johannes, adopted Gentile names and habits[5] to gain favour with Antiochus. The son was the builder of Heliopolis. We are told how Jesus and Johannes (called by the Greek names of Jason and Menelaus) trafficked in sacred things with Antiochus, and, on the authority of Petrus, that the holy fire was quenched at the time of their mercenary

[1] See 2 Maccab. iii.

[2] The name Panarethon given in Higden's text to this book was, according to Jerome (Præf. in Lib. Sol. ix. 1242, Migne) the name given to the volume made up of the Wisdom of Sirach, the Book of Proverbs, and the Wisdom of Solomon. The title was ἡ πανάρετος σοφία or ἡ πανάρετος. Cf. Routh's Rell. Sacr. i. 278.

[3] The real fact was that Seleucus Philopator gave his own son Demetrius as a hostage in the place of his brother Epiphanes.

[4] On this Onias and the city which he built, see article Onias 5 in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible and the references there given. The builder of the city was Onias, son of of Onias, not the son of Simon as Higden states.

actions. The history proceeds with the profanations attempted and perpetrated by Antiochus in Jerusalem, and the resistance offered thereto by Mattathias and his sons. This history drawn from Petrus corresponds with the story of the books of the Maccabees, containing all the additional particulars, which are given in the second book concerning the death of Antiochus. The same chapter also notices that Antiochus Eupator, the son of Epiphanes, continued[1] the war against the Jews.

Cap. XXXVI.

The next chapter commences with the return of Demetrius Soter[2] from Rome, and his occupation of the kingdom of Syria. The story tells that he had gone to Rome to accuse his uncle, and hearing of his death returned to claim the kingdom. Both Lysias and the young King Antiochus were put to death by him. Then is given the appeal of Alcimus to Demetrius, the death of Nicanor, Judas' treaty with the Romans, and then his death. Next follows the history of the war of Alexander[3] against Demetrius Soter and his son, Demetrius Nicator, and the murder of Alexander in Arabia. Jonathan, brother of Judas Maccabæus, is at first a supporter of Nicator, but when Antiochus, the son of Alexander, is brought forward by Tryphon he favours his claim, and also forms a new league with the Romans and with the Spartans. Tryphon slays Jonathan (who is succeeded by his brother Simon), and then takes the kingdom, murdering the young Antiochus. Simon joins the party of Demetrius Nicator, who is killed by Arsaces, king of Persia, and succeeded by his brother,[1] Antiochus VII. Sidetes, who at first was friendly with Simon, but afterwards sent Cendebeus to attack Judæa. Cendebeus is defeated, and Simon renews his friendship with the Romans and Spartans. Then is told how Simon and his two sons were treacherously slain by Ptolemy, prince of Jericho, Simon's son-in-law; and how John Hyrcanus, one of Simon's sons, besieged Ptolemy, but was obliged to withdraw from the siege. Antiochus Sidetes (called in the text Ponticus [2]) besieges Jerusalem, but is bought off by Hyrcanus with a portion of the treasure from David's tomb. Hyrcanus obtains the friendship of the Romans, and destroys Samaria, which was afterwards restored by Herod. Hyrcanus dies, after being duke for twenty-three years,[3] Aristobulus, his eldest son, succeeding him. This latter imprisoned his mother and three younger brothers, and at first favoured his second brother, Antigonus, but soon after murdered him. The kingdom of Judæa may be considered as beginning from this Aristobulus. On his death without issue, his brothers are released from prison, and one of them, Alexander Jannæus, is made king. After a reign of great cruelty [4] he dies, leaving two sons, Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, but committing the kingdom to his wife Alexandra, who was popular with the Jews. At this

Cap. XXXVIII.

[1] He is called son in the text, p. 132, but was the son of Demetrius Soter.

[2] I cannot discover the source from whence the name Ponticus comes, but as the name Sidetes is from Side in Pamphylia, where he was brought up, so the other name may for a similar reason be derived from some connection with Pontus.

[3] There is much confusion about the duration of Hyrcanus' power. Josephus in one place makes it thirty-one years, in another thirty-three; Eusebius puts it at twenty-six. Cf. Josephus, Ant. Jud. xiii. 10., B. J. i. 2., Euseb. Chron. p. 94.

[4] A great part of the savage conduct of Jannæus seems to have been caused by the hostility between the Pharisees and Sadducees, with the former of which parties he was at first identified, but subsequently went over to their opponents. See Joseph. A. J. xiii. 12–15.

point the chronicle leaves the further history of the Seleucidæ, and confines itself to the more limited subject of the history of the Jews, merely intimating that the Syrian power was in the end overthrown by the Romans.[1]

Alexandra reigned nine years, and was guided in her policy by the Pharisees, and on her death the contests of her sons, Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, gave the Romans an excuse for interfering in the affairs of Judæa. By Pompey[2] Hyrcanus was made prince and priest and Aristobulus imprisoned. Scaurus was left as Roman governor of Syria. Pompey's ill-success dates from the time when he permitted the Jewish temple to be desecrated and used as a stable. Cap. XL.

We are briefly told that Antipater the Idumean,[3] the father of Herod the Great, was a friend of Hyrcanus, and from previous services had interest enough with Julius Cæsar to obtain the appointment of procurator of Judæa. He set Herod, his second son, over Galilee, and when the father was poisoned[4] the son and his brother were promoted through the influence of Antonius. Herod was subsequently declared king of Judæa, but was not able to enter on the possession of his kingdom for four years, through the opposition of Antigonus, who represented the Asmonean dynasty. Herod married subsequently Mariamne, a niece of this Antigonus, and Cap. XLIII,

[1] Antiochus XIII. Asiaticus was the last king of Syria, and was dethroned by Pompey B.C. 65.

[2] The transaction was much more complicated than Higden records. At first Pompey sent M. Æmilius Scaurus from Damascus to settle the disputes of Hyrcanus and his brother. Scaurus put Aristobulus in possession of the throne, but Pompey, on coming in person, reversed this decision, for what reason we are not told. Cf. Joseph. Ant. Jud. xiv. 3–5.

[3] For an account of Antipater see Joseph. Ant. Jud. xiv. 7. He had been made governor of Idumea by Alexander Jannæus.

conformed to the Jewish law. The chapter ends with an account of his wives and children, and the fate of some of them, his favour with the Romans, and his buildings to their honour. From this point such portion of the Jewish history as is given in Higden may be most fitly included with his details of the early Christians.

Isolated events.

Cap. xxxi.

It is noticed in chapter xxxi., about the time of the restoration of Pyrrhus king of Epirus through the aid of Ptolemy Lagus, that Agathocles[1] was ruling in Sicily, and that at the same time flourished Theophrastus and Menander. And in chapter xxxvii. we are told that about the time of John Hyrcanus, Africa suffered from a terrible plague of locusts; and about the same period an eruption of Mount Ætna took place, which so destroyed Catana and its neighbourhood that the Romans remitted their tribute for ten years.

Cap. xxxvii.

Roman history.

The events of Roman history which Higden notices in this volume extend from the dictatorship[2] of L. Papirius Cursor to the death of the Emperor Domitian.[3] The authorities are Eutropius, Livy, Trogus, Suetonius, and Orosius. Papirius is said to have overthrown the Samnites so thoroughly that the site of their city could not be found. The insults of the Tarentines to the Romans are next mentioned, and the narrative is continued by the history of Pyrrhus in Italy, the account of which concludes with the mention of certain prodigies which appeared there at that time.

In the account of the poet's thrifty habits, a mistake is made by the translator of the Harleian MS., which shows that the knowledge of Latin he possessed was hardly enough to qualify him for his task.[3] A Gallic invasion of Italy under Britomarus is defeated.[4] Now begins the second Punic war, in which Hannibal's progress towards Rome is related, and the low state to which the Romans were reduced. Occasion is here taken to mention the bringing of the statute of the Idæan mother, Cybele, from Pessinus [5] to Rome, and the story is in substance that of Ovid's Fasti. Philip [6] of Macedonia helped Hannibal at this time, and Sardinia revolted from the Romans. So that there were four Roman armies afield at one time, in Italy, Spain, Sardinia, and Macedonia. Cap. cessful in Macedonia, and Antiochus the Great is attacked by the Romans for sheltering Hannibal. Philip of Macedonia helps them in this attack, and for so doing receives back his son Demetrius, who had been a hostage at Rome. Hannibal withdraws from the court of Antiochus and goes to Prusias, king of Bithynia, where he takes poison and kills himself. Scipio Africanus banished from Rome dies at Amiternum.[1] The mention of Scipio leads to an account of Scipio Nasica's[2] prohibition of a permanent theatre at Rome, and some notice of the character and purpose of early scenic performances.

Cap. XXXV. The revolt of Perseus from the Romans, and the consequent reduction of Macedonia to a Roman province is next mentioned. The victor Æmilius Paullus, is said, on the authority of Isidore, to have first brought Greek books to Rome; the mention of which circumstance leads to some remarks on the libraries of old time.

Ennius died about this time and was buried in the tomb of Scipio.

Cap. XXXVI. The third Punic war begins, and is successfully carried on by the younger Scipio. The discussion at Rome whether Carthage should be destroyed, is carried against Scipio Nasica, who would have spared it, that the Romans might have a constant cause for watchfulness. Here the authority is Augustine once more. Carthage is rebuilt, after much loss to the Romans in Africa, in the twenty-second year after its destruction. About the same time a Gallic inroad over the Rhone into Roman territory is repulsed.

[1] This is a mistake for Liternum in Campania, near which place Scipio had an estate, see Seneca, Ep. 86, and Livy, xxxviii. 56.

[2] This was the son of the Nasica who received the statue of Cybele on its arrival at Rome. The son had the distinguishing name of Corculum.

The next chapter introduces Cicero, but tells us little about him, and confounds him in one story with Tullus Hostilius.[1] The authority for what is said of him is John of Salisbury. Later on in the chapter Marius' conquest of Jugurtha and his victories over the Cimbri are noticed, as is also the social war and its end. Sallust's birth is entered here, and the numerous prodigies which appeared in many parts of Italy, and by an error in chronology [2] the social disturbances about the agrarian law of the Gracchi are placed at this date. Many things are then mentioned in the lives of Marius and Sulla, much of the authority for which is St. Augustine. Sulla's triumph over Mithridates introduces a short account of the king of Pontus, whose death, and the appointment of Tigranes as king of Syria [3] by Pompey, closes the chapter.

Cap. XXXVIII.

Cap. XXXIX.

The next chapter is mainly occupied with Roman affairs. The success of Plautus as a writer of plays, and the death of Sulla are the first events noticed. Nicomedes,[4] king of Bithynia, leaves his kingdom to the Romans. The Gladiatorial war comes next, and the victorious general, Marcus the Proconsul, is the afterwards famous Crassus. In brief sentences are mentioned the birth of Horace, Pompey's conquest of Jerusalem, and Catiline's rebellion with Sallust's history thereof. Then Livy's birth, Virgil's education at Cremona, and Julius Cæsar's consulship, after which, obtaining Gaul for his province he invades Britain. Bede is here added to the usual authorities, and the chapter closes with the murder of Crassus by the Parthians.[5]

Cap. XL.

[1] See p. 140.

[2] Sallust's birth was B.C. 86; Tib. Gracchus' B.C. 166, and his proposed agrarian law, B.C. 133.

[3] Which here means Armenia.

[4] This was Nicomedes III. Philopator.

[5] The unfortunate end of Crassus is said by Higden, though he does not give his authority, to have been

Cap. XLI. The Roman affairs comprised in the next chapter consist of the quarrel and war between Cæsar and Pompey and the death of the latter, with Cæsar's expedition into Egypt. Higden also knows of the Julian reform of the calendar. Cæsar's conquests in Asia and Africa lead to the mention of Cato's suicide, and this to an account of the most celebrated men[1] of that name. Cæsar's achievements are resumed, and the chapter ends with his death in the Capitol, pierced with twenty-three wounds.[2]

Cap. XLII. This chapter is also devoted to the history of Cæsar,[3] and consists of anecdotes from Petrus, Pliny, Valerius, Suetonius, and John of Salisbury, and the mention of Catiline's conspiracy is introduced for the purpose of quoting the comparison from Sallust between Cæsar and Marcus Cato.

a punishment for plundering the temple at Jerusalem, from which he took two thousand talents, which Pompey, with all his sacrilegious enormities, had left untouched. The story of this pillage of the temple by Crassus is found in Josephus (Jud. Ant. xiv. 7; B. J. i. 8), but it is looked upon with suspicion, because, so far as we can learn from other authorities, Crassus' head-quarters were never less than 400 Roman miles from Jerusalem. The story is also mentioned in the Latin treatise "De Bello Judaico," which is an enlarged translation of Josephus, and is the work which Higden cites so frequently at this part of his chronicle under the name of Hegesippus. The story is given at full length in Prideaux's Connection, pt. 2. bk. vii.

[1] Mennius, which is the name assigned to one of the number by all the MSS. is seen from what is related of him, to have been M. Porcius Cato Licinianus. Cato the Censor was, according to Higden, the author of the school book Ethica Catonis, so well known to Chaucer, and which can be traced back to about the fourth century, A.D.

[2] With singular inconsistency Higden quotes from Eutropius (see p. 206) that Cæsar fell pierced with 23 wounds, and immediately afterwards (p. 208) says, without giving his authority, and in a passage where other mistakes are found "nec vulnus in corpore ejus apparuit."

[3] The authority is not given, but the fatal day for Cæsar is made to be the kalends of July and not the ides of March.

The next chapter opens with an account of the parentage and adoption of Octavius, and the formation of the triumvirate of Octavianus, Antonius, and Lepidus. The defeat of Brutus and Cassius, and the surrender of Cicero to Antonius are mentioned, with the cause of Cicero's murder. The death of Porcia, wife of Brutus, the birth of Ovid, and death of Sallust[1] are put close together. Sallust it was who introduced the letter K into the Roman alphabet.[2] Cap. XLI.

The defeat of Antonius at Actium, and his flight into Egypt, and the death of himself and Cleopatra open this chapter, in which are mentioned Augustus' favour towards Herod the Great, the death of Varro and Virgil, and a large portion of it is consumed by the narration of the magic arts which the stories of the Middle Ages attributed to Virgil.[3] Higden's authority is Alexander de naturis, i.e. Alexander Neckham. The death of Horace and of Marcius Porcius Latro conclude the notices of Roman events in the chapter.[4] Cap. XLIV.

In connection with the birth of Christ mention is made of the decree of Augustus, which caused the Virgin's visit to Bethlehem. The purpose of the decree Lib. V. Cap. I.

[1] The story that Sallust married Cicero's divorced wife can scarcely be true. Terentia had been Cicero's wife for thirty years when she was divorced, and Sallust at that time was just forty years of age.

[2] The old Latin alphabet had k as the hard guttural, but it soon fell into disuse, and was only retained in abbreviations of such words as kalendæ, &c. Its introduction by Sallust is of course absurd. Cf. Roby, Latin Grammar, p. 34.

[3] For an account of the romance which was current about Virgil's powers, and which is an amplification of Higden's notice, see an article in the Fortnightly, June 1872. The mediæval story makes Virgil study at Toledo, a statement which may help us to form an opinion of its origin.

[4] The latter of these notices is from Marianus Scotus, an authority but seldom quoted by Higden.

was, on the authority of Petrus, that the population of the empire might be known by the number of pence contributed of which each person was to pay one.

Cap. II. Augustus dies, said to have been poisoned or killed by the treachery of Livia.[1]

Cap. III. The next chapter is composed of anecdotes of his life, in which his popularity among foreign nations, his invention of the letter X,[2] his improvements of the city of Rome, his moral character, personal appearance, and clemency are noticed, and in addition to the usual authorities Macrobius and Seneca are here quoted. Augustus died at Nola.[3]

Cap. IV. Tiberius succeeds and reigns well and wisely at first; but afterwards his real character is shown. Examples are given of his deeds. Ovid is banished during this reign. Tiberius sends to Judæa for Christ to heal him of a sore disease, but he has been already crucified, nevertheless the impression of the Saviour's face on a cloth preserved by Veronica effects the desired cure.

Cap. VI. Tiberius dies from poison[4] in the 78th year of his age. He wished Tiberius, the son of Drusus, to succeed him, but that prince was too negligent to come first to an appointment which the emperor made with him, and Caligula consequently was preferred before him.

[1] This is contradicted by all ancient testimony.

[2] With as little foundation as Sallust's invention of K. Though Higden's taste seems to have led him to notice such matters, he has no mention of the orthographical changes introduced by Claudius.

[3] Singularly enough Higden professes to quote from Eutropius, but gives Nola as the place where Augustus died, whereas Eutropius says his death took place at Atella. Tacitus, Suetonius, Dion, Zonaras, all give Nola. Eutropius is only followed by Jerome's translation of Eusebius' Chron. "Augustus Atellæ in Campania moritur."

[4] Suetonius (Tib. 73) says on this point: "Sunt qui putent venenum "ei a Gaio datum."

Caligula's parentage, crimes, and attempt to introduce his statue into the Jewish temple, with the accusation and banishment of Pilate, are all the events which Higden notices here. Cap. VII.

But in the next chapter Gaius' murder is mentioned in the notice of Claudius' succession. The great exploit of Claudius was his expedition to Britain. His wives and children are mentioned, and that he was poisoned by Agrippina to make way for her son Nero. The part said to have been played by Herod Agrippa in aiding Claudius' advancement to the empire will be noticed afterwards. Cap. VIII.

Of Nero are related his love for music and his performances thereof, his burning of the city,[1] his debauchery and extravagance, and the murders of his relatives and friends, among which a longer notice is given to the case of Seneca, and that philosopher's character is defended. Nero sent Vespasian against the Jews, and on hearing that Galba had been elected emperor by the troops in Spain, slew himself. Cap. IX.

Of Galba is mentioned the election, his adoption of Piso and his death; of Otho, the early success, and eventual failure and suicide; of Vitellius, his cruelty and gluttony; the murder of Sabinus, brother of Vespasian, for which Vitellius was killed by the Flavian partisans. Vespasian's character and conquests are briefly noticed, but most of the chapter is occupied by an account taken from Josephus, of the destruction of Jerusalem, which will be noticed afterwards. Vespasian's death is said to have taken place in a villa in the neighbourhood of the Sabines, and a curious anecdote is quoted of his standing up just as he was dying. Cap. X.

[1] Higden says nothing of the attempt made by Nero to throw the blame of the fire upon the Christians.

Cap. xi. The learning and liberality of Titus are the only points mentioned in his life; the former on the authority of Eutropius, the latter on that of John of Salisbury.

Cap. xii. Domitian, brother of Titus, made his empress to be first called Augusta, and wished divine honours to be paid to himself, and his statues to be all of pure gold. Higden mentions some of his legislation, and that he built the Pantheon. He celebrated a triumph over the Dacians and Germans, but his character was altogether bad. He was murdered after a reign of rather more than fifteen years, and was succeeded by Nerva, under whose mild sway many of the persons banished by Domitian were recalled.

Christian history. In the account which Higden gives of Christ and his followers and teaching, we are first told the traditional

Lib. iii. Cap. xliv. story of the parentage of the Virgin Mary. Her mother was Anna, and her father Joachim ; but, besides Joachim Anna had two other husbands, first Cleophas, and her daughter born to him, who was also called Mary, was the mother of James, Joseph, Jude, and Simon, who in Scripture are spoken of as the brethren of our Lord ; and Anna's third husband was Salome, to whom she bore a third Mary, called for distinction Mary Salome, who was wife of Zebedee and mother of James and John. Joseph, the reputed father of our Lord, was brother to Cleophas, the second husband of the Virgin's mother. The history then takes up the conception of John the

Lib. iv. Cap. i. Baptist, adding some comments on the chronology, which are followed by similar details in reference to our Saviour, which lead to a discussion on the proper date for the termination of the fifth age of the world. Mary's visit to Elizabeth, Augustus' decree, and Christ's birth in Bethlehem are next recounted. The other events of Christ's early life are in accord with St. Luke except that we are told that the idols of Egypt fell down when Christ entered that land, and that the holy family remained in their banishment six years. After this follows a chronological discussion of the length of Christ's life on earth.

Cap. II. The next chapter begins with a notice of a circle round the sun, and a spring of oil in the Trans-tiberine part of Rome that flowed all the day on which Christ was born ; we are also told that a statue set up by Romulus fell down, as he had predicted it would. The reason why Herod killed off all the children of two years and under was that on Christ's birth he had suddenly been called to Rome to answer the accusations of two of his sons. He remained there nearly two years, and so all the children born between the visit of the Magi and his return were to be slain. The three most notorious Herods were Herod the Great, called Ascalonita, his son Antipas, and Herod Agrippa I., son of Aristobulus. Herod, on his way to Rome, burnt the ships of the men of Tarsus, because they conveyed the Magi. The two sons who had accused their father at Rome were subsequently put to death by him, as was also his first-born Antipater.

The joke of Augustus preferring the fate of Herod's swine to that of his sons, is duly recorded. Herod dies miserably, having first attempted to commit suicide. He orders that on his death the sons of the Jewish nobles should be slain, that there might be some mourning when he died. He also would fain have destroyed the Jewish chronicles, which were kept in the archives of the temple. The division of Herod's dominions, and Christ's return from Egypt and his visit to the temple, are here mentioned, as also the accusation and banishment of Archelaus.

Cap. IV. Under the reign of Tiberius, mention is made of the appointment of Pontius Pilate as governor of Judæa, an appointment said to have been agreeable to Herod Antipas, though Pilate's ambition afterwards led to the quarrel which was only healed at the time of Christ's trial. The account given of Pilate's origin is utterly without foundation. One account is given here of Pilate's end, but a different one in a later chapter. A considerable space is devoted to a description of the Jewish sects, Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes.

Cap. v. In the account of Christ's life given in the next chapter, there is nothing which differs from the Gospel history, but a great deal of ingenuity is spent over distinctions of miracles, and chronological arrangements of the events of our Lord's life. After the account of the death of John the Baptist, we are told of the present resting-place of the finger which pointed at Christ, and of his head, which Higden says is shown at Amiens.

Cap. vi. Mentioning briefly the great eclipse which occurred at Christ's crucifixion, and also the rending of rocks, the history passes to the day of Pentecost, and then to the appointment of the seven, and the election of James the Less as Bishop of Jerusalem. The virtues of James are dwelt on, and also the conduct of Nicholas to prove himself not jealous, and an account is given of Judas Iscariot, making the life of the traitor to have consisted of events exactly similar to those of Œdipus in the Greek tragedies. Stephen is stoned and the disciples scattered, Peter first becoming a bishop in the east, then at Antioch, and at last at Rome. A very brief notice is given to St. Paul's conversion and labours, though much is made of the visit of Seneca to the apostle when he was a prisoner at Rome.

Cap. vii. Caligula is said to have been a friend to Herod Agrippa, but to have banished Antipas. The fate of the daughter of Herodias is described in the translation by Trevisa thus: "Þe eorþe swelowede þe wenche þat

" tomblede." In this chapter is also given the other account of Pilate's end, his banishment, and the trouble his body caused after he was dead.

In Claudius' reign occurred the famine foretold by Agabus, and Helen, the Queen of the Adiabeni, helped the Jews at Jerusalem. Some notice is given of St. Mark and the compilation of his gospel; also of Marcial, bishop of Limoges, and Apollinaris, bishop of Ravenna.[1] Mark, against his own wish, is made bishop of Alexandria. The death of Herod Agrippa I. is mentioned, and his final visit to Cæsarea is said to have been made to celebrate plays in honour of Cæsar. A little history is also given of his previous adventures. It was to his son Herod Agrippa II. that Christian men fled over Jordan when Jerusalem was about to be taken. The Virgin Mary died at this time, and Philip the apostle was crucified at Hieropolis. Lazarus, who had been made bishop of Cyprus, died the second time four and twenty years after his resurrection. Paul's trial and appeal conclude the notices of the Christian church in this chapter. Cap. VIII.

Under Nero Paul came to Rome, but no mention occurs of Nero's accusation of the Christians. Peter ordained two bishops at Rome, Linus and Cletus (called also Anacletus). Luke was at Rome and wrote there the Acts of the Apostles. The soldier who pierced Christ's side, who was called Longinus, was martyred at this time in Cappadocia. He became a Christian from having his sight restored by the blood which ran from Christ's wound. The martyrdom of James the Just is related from Eusebius. St. Mark died in Egypt. Linus the bishop is martyred. St. Peter overcame the magical Cap. IX.

[1] On the name Ravenna, see ch. x. p. 458.

arts of Simon Magus, who was much regretted by Nero. St. Peter and St. Paul were now martyred at Rome, and Vespasian sent against Jerusalem. Clemens Romanus was made a bishop, but some of the particulars of the account are difficult to reconcile with the previous notice of Linus' death. The body of Clemens was discovered long after his death.

Cap. x. The history of the siege of Jerusalem is abridged from Josephus, only it is suggested that it was for the crucifixion of Christ rather than, as he says, for the murder of James the Just, that such a terrible visitation came.

Cap. xi. A certain bishop Julianus, said to have been Simon the Leper, died about this time; but he is a different personage from St. Julian, the patron of hospitality, whose history is related here.

Cap. xii. Anacletus the Pope, who is here said to be a different person from Cletus, died, and was succeeded by Evaristus. St. John, who had been banished by Domitian to Patmos, returns from exile on that emperor's death.

The chief authorities for the earlier portion of the Christian history are St. Luke and Petrus, and for the latter portion Eusebius.

British History. Lib. iii. Cap. xxxi. The notices of British history are very scanty, and are all from Geoffrey of Monmouth, except where Bede is quoted about the invasion of Julius Cæsar. They commence with the death of Morvidus the cruel,[1] who was swallowed by a sea monster. Of his five sons, first reigned and died Gorbonianus the eldest. He was succeeded by Archgallo, whose cruelty provoked a rebellion, through which he was banished. The third brother, Elidurus, now succeeds, and in a hunting expedition in the forest of Galtres[1] finds his brother Archgallo in hiding, and induces the nobles to restore him to the throne. When Archgallo dies, Elidurus is again king, but is seized and imprisoned by the two younger brothers, Vigenius and Peridurus; but when they are dead, he is released and made king a third time, and finishes his reign in peace. Of the next thirty-two kings,[2] Bledgaret[3] is the only one noticed, and is said to have been famed for his musical powers. Then reigned Hely, who left three remarkable sons, Lud, Cassibalanus,[4] and Nennius. Of whom Lud reigns first, and built Caer- Cap. XL.

[1] Of the name Yngelwode or Inglewode given to this forest in the MSS. C.D., I can find no trace near York. There was an Inglewood forest in Cumberland, between Carlisle and Caldbeck, see Pearson's Historical Maps of England, p. 45, but no such name occurs in the neighbourhood of Galtres. The explanation of Calaterium in the text (p. 28) as the forest of Galtres appears to be due to Higden. It is not correct, however, to assign the other explanation, "juxta urbem "Alcluit," to Geoffrey. All that the latter says is, that Archgallo was found "in Calaterio nemore," and was taken by his brother "in civi- "tatem Alclud." Alclud is thought to be Dumbartonshire. See Pearson, p. 20; also Bede, H.E. i. 12, and Alanus ab Insulis Explanat. in Merlini prophet. p. 214.

XLIV. third son, Nennius.[1] Kymbelinus succeeds his father Tenuantius, and leaves two sons, Guyderius and Arviragus; the former of whom reigned first, and refused to pay tribute to the Romans, for which cause it was that Claudius invaded Britain. That Emperor visited the Orcades, and named his son Britannicus in honour of his British expedition. Lælius[2] Hamo, one of Claudius' generals, slew Guyderius at Porchester. The same Hamo gave name to Hampton. Arviragus succeeds his brother, and was married to a daughter of Claudius. They were married at a place which received the name of Claudiocester, and is now Gloucester; but Higden records another derivation for the name. Claudius sent his legions into Ireland. Arviragus after a time rebelled against the Roman rule. This rebellion led to the sending of Vespasian to Britain, and he quelled it. Marius, the son of Arviragus, succeeds his father, and gains a great victory over the invading forces of Rodric, King of the Picts. Westmoreland has its name from this king. A stone which he set up in honour of his great victory, and inscribed "Marii Victoriæ," was mistaken by William of Malmesbury for a record of the Roman general Marius. But this was because William had never seen the British book, and did not know of Marius, King of Britain. The conquered troops of Rodric were permitted by Marius to settle in Caithness.[3]

In the preface to vol. iii. (p. xxvii.), it was suggested that Ceadboldes wigh (Cod. Dip. 427, 1198), in Berkshire, came nearer to the form of Cherdhole or Sherdehoole mentioned in vol. ii. (p. 22), than Cheddar, which had been suggested by Prof. Babington. Since that time I have been shown by Mr. W. Aldis Wright, a MS. in the Trinity College Library (R. 14. 7.), containing an account of the marvels of England, in which the first that is mentioned is Chedirhole. This converts Prof. Babington's conjecture into a certainty. The whole piece in which the name occurs seems valuable as an illustration of portions of Higden's first book, I have therefore printed it in extenso as an appendix to this volume. There is a somewhat similar account of the marvels of England printed by Hearne as the first appendix to his edition of Robert of Gloucester. The orthography of all the names in his account differs from that of the MS. from which I have printed, and I have shown the variations in the notes. The first sentence in Hearne's copy, which is not contained in the Trinity MS., shows that Peccum, mentioned by Higden (vol. ii. p. 22), is most likely the Peak in Derbyshire.[2]

Two more copies of Higden have been discovered by the researches of the Historical Documents Commission, one in Countess Cowper's collection, the other in that of Mr. Ormsby Gore. From the descriptions given of them

Duodecimus est fons dulcissimus in arenis maris, ubi mare bis cotidie crescit et decrescit ad spacium fere mille pedum, et semper et in crescente et in decrescente distat fons a salso per septem pedes. Tertius decimus est lapis juxta fontem ad modum altaris factus in nemore, in quocunque die tingitur lapis ille de aqua fontis ipsius, in eadem die sine dubio fecundissime pluet. Quartus decimus est Caribdis, id est, ingens vorago maris per girum sub immanem lapidem sistens[2] [forsan diffluens] super rupem, in qua si virgas vel magnas perticas simul ligatas jactaveris, post paululum invenies eas dealbatas et cortice carentes longe a voragine[3] in litore quasi vi projectas unam post aliam jacentes. Quintus decimus est lapis perforatus in vertice montis, in cujus foramine si virgam mittas, perge ad tria miliaria sub monte ad arenam maris, et virgam eandem ibi invenies. Sextum decimum est lacus: si volueris reparare aliquod ferramentum[4] exceptis armis, porta ad lacum, et quantum volueris prandium, et mitte super ripam laci cibum et ferrum, et recede, deinde rediens invenies instrumentum tuum bene reparatum. Septimum decimum est quasi ostium[5] juxta pedem montis maximi: accipe cibum tecum quantum oporteat te comedere[6] in vii. diebus, et candelam similiter, et ingredere in illam foveam, et manducabis cibum vii. dierum, et candelam ardebis totam, et credes te fuisse ibi per vii. dies, et tamen eodem die quo intrasti exibis,[7] nec eris intus per spatium de toto unius diei. Octavum decimum est fons quidam in villa quæ dicitur Drithwich[8] longe ab omni salsugine maris, unde fit optimum sal et candidissimum ut nix, et subtilissimum ut farina candidissima, sed est asperius quam et sali convenit; sed nec in die Sabbati ab hora nona usque in diem Lunæ mane, nec in die apostoli nec alicujus sancti in ecclesia villæ illius parochiali nunciata, nec in vigiliis, potest ullo modo sal fieri. Cum autem appropinquat hiems[8] cadunt simul et glandes et frondes et cortex, sic quod totus remanet nudus, et excoriatum quasi omnino arefactum. CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the present Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most "complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional "point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the "want of proper Calendars and Indexes."

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[Royal 8vo., half-bound. Price 10*s.* each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an "uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's "royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, "and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional know- "ledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He "would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His "wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the "ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever "expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. The Chronicle of England, by John Capgrave. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. Chronicon Monasterii de Abingdon. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. Lives of Edward the Confessor. I.—La Estoire de Seint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Æduuardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. Monumenta Franciscana; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. Fasciculi Zizaniorum Magistri Johannis Wyclif cum Tritico. Ascribed to Thomas Netter, of Walden, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. Shirley, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. The Buik of the Croniclis of Scotland ; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece ; by William Stewart. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. Turnbull, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the " evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this ; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true ; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern owland Scotch.

7. Johannis Capgrave Liber de Illustribus Henricis. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. Historia Monasterii S. Augustini Cantuariensis, by Thomas of Elmham, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by Charles Hardwick, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. Eulogium (Historiarum sive Temporis) : Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366 ; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. Haydon, Esq., B.A. 1858–1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andreæ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of this volume are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLE, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859–1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A Collection of Political Poems and Songs relating to English History, from the Accession of Edward III. to the Reign of Henry VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1859–1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "Opus Tertium," "Opus Minus," &c., of Roger Bacon. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologiæ."

16. Bartholomæi de Cotton, Monachi Norwicensis, Historia Anglicana; 449–1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. Brut y Tywysogion; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. John Williams ab Ithel, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Caedwala at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A Collection of Royal and Historical Letters during the Reign of Henry IV. 1399–1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. The Repressor of over much Blaming of the Clergy. By Reginald Pecock, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Churchill Babington, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecock, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. Annales Cambriæ. Edited by the Rev. John Williams ab Ithel, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. The Works of Giraldus Cambrensis. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. James F. Dimock, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861–1868.

The first three volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185–6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188, and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Kambriæ et Descriptio Kambriæ.

22. Letters and Papers illustrative of the Wars of the English in France during the Reign of Henry the Sixth, King of England. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861–1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impérial, and the Depôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, according to the several Original Authorities. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by Benjamin Thorpe, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. Letters and Papers illustrative of the Reigns of Richard III. and Henry VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by James Gairdner, Esq. 1861–1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. Letters of Bishop Grosseteste, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. Descriptive Catalogue of Manuscripts relating to the History of Great Britain and Ireland. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066–1200. Vol. III.; 1200–1327. By Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862–1871.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. Royal and other Historical Letters illustrative of the Reign of Henry III. Vol. I., 1216–1235. Vol. II., 1236–1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. Shirley, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862–1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. Chronica Monasterii S. Albani.—1. Thomæ Walsingham Historia Anglicana; Vol. I., 1272–1381: Vol. II., 1381–1422. 2. Willelmi Rishanger Chronica et Annales, 1259–1307. 3. Johannis de Trokelowe et Henrici de Blaneforde Chronica et Annales, 1259–1296; 1307–1324; 1392–1406. 4. Gesta Abbatum Monasterii S. Albani, a Thoma Walsingham, regnante Ricardo Secundo, ejusdem Ecclesiæ Præcentore, compilata; Vol. I., 793–1290: Vol. II., 1290–1349: Vol. III., 1349–1411. 5. Johannis Amundesham, Monachi Monasterii S. Albani, ut videtur, Annales; Vols. I. and II. 6. Registra quorundam Abbatum Monasterii S. Albani, qui sæculo XV^mo^ floruere; Vol. I., Registrum Abbatiæ Johannis Whethamstede, Abbatis Monasterii Sancti Albani, iterum susceptæ; Roberto Blakeney, Capellano, quondam adscriptum. Edited by Henry Thomas Riley, Esq., M.A., Cambridge and Oxford; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863–1872.

In the first two volumes is a history of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., written by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of St. Albans and prior of the cell of Wymundham, belonging to that abbey. It is printed from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, attributed to William Rishanger, monk of Saint Albans, who lived in the reign of Edward I., printed from the Cottonian Manuscript, Faustina B. IX. (of the fourteenth century) in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219–231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cottonian Manuscript, Claudius E. III., fols. 306–331: Also an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol by Edward I., 1291–1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., attributed to William Rishanger above mentioned, but on no sufficient ground: A short Chronicle of English History, from 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.:

A short Chronicle from 1297 to 1307, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with an addition of Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1299, 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1295 to 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: and a fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1285 to 1307, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer, 1259 to 1296, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henricus de Blaneforde, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A full Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer of St. Albans, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and an account of the benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, and of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the house, from 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of the Abbey in the reign of Richard II.; from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum; with a Continuation, from the closing pages of the Parker MS. No. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The eighth and ninth volumes, in continuation of the Annals, contain a Chronicle, probably written by John Amundesham, a monk of St. Albans.

The tenth volume relates especially to the acts and proceedings of Abbot Whethamstede, and may be considered as a memorial of the chief historical and domestic events occurring during the first ten years of his second abbacy. The Register was in all probability compiled between 1465 and 1476.

29. Chronicon Abbatiæ Eveshamensis, Auctoribus Dominico Priore Eveshamiæ et Thoma de Marleberge Abbate, a Fundatione ad Annum 1213, una cum Continuatione ad Annum 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. Macray, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. Ricardi de Cirencestria Speculum Historiale de Gestis Regum Angliæ. Vol. I., 447–871. Vol. II., 872–1066. Edited by John E. B. Mayor, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863–1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355–1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Brittaniæ, in 1747.

31. Year Books of the Reign of Edward the First. Years 20–21, 30–31, and 32–33. Edited and translated by Alfred John Horwood, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863–1866.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. Narratives of the Expulsion of the English from Normandy, 1449–1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normanniæ: Le Recouvrement de Normendie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conferences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. Historia et Cartularium Monasterii S. Petri Gloucestriæ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. Hart, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863–1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. Alexandri Neckam de Naturis Rerum libri duo; with Neckam's Poem, De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; "but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. Leechdoms, Wortcunning, and Starcraft of Early England; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. Oswald Cockayne, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864–1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. Annales Monastici. Vol. I. :—Annales de Margan, 1066–1232 ; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066–1263 ; Annales de Burton, 1004–1263. Vol. II. :—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519–1277 ; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1–1291. Vol. III. :—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1–1297 ; Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042–1432. Vol. IV. :—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347 ; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066–1289 ; Annales Prioratus de Wigornia, 1–1377. Vol. V. :—Index and Glossary. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registrary of the University, Cambridge. 1864–1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. Magna Vita S. Hugonis Episcopi Lincolniensis. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. James F. Dimock, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and, being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186 ; he died on the 16th of November 1200 ; and was canonized in 1220.

38. Chronicles and Memorials of the Reign of Richard the First. Vol. I. :—Itinerarium Peregrinorum et Gesta Regis Ricardi. Vol. II. :—Epistolæ Cantuarienses ; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury ; 1187 to 1199. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864–1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199 ; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records ; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. Recueil des Croniques et anchiennes Istories de la Grant Bretaigne a present nomme Engleterre, par Jehan de Waurin. Vol. I.,

Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399–1422. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864–1868.

40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WAVRIN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Vols. III. and IV. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH RAWSON LUMBY, M.A., late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1865–1872.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVERE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVERE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livere de Reis de Engletere." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA, AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866–1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. Matthæi Parisiensis Historia Anglorum, sive, ut vulgo dicitur, Historia Minor. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067–1253. Edited by Sir Frederic Madden, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866–1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the "Historia Major." The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. Liber Monasterii de Hyda: a Chronicle and Chartulary of Hyde Abbey, Winchester, 455–1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by Edward Edwards, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources, which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from, writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments. There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. Chronicon Scotorum: a Chronicle of Irish Affairs, from the Earliest Times to 1135; with a Supplement, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by William Maunsell Hennessy, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are, the invasions of foreigners, and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. The Chronicle of Pierre de Langtoft, in French Verse, from the earliest Period to the Death of Edward I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1866–1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III., and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. The War of the Gaedhil with the Gaill, or, The Invasions of Ireland by the Danes and other Norsemen. Edited, with a Translation, by James Henthorn Todd, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. Gesta Regis Henrici Secundi Benedicti Abbatis. The Chronicle of the Reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., 1169–1192; known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough. Vols. I. and II. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. Munimenta Academica, or, Documents illustrative of Academical Life and Studies at Oxford (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. Henry Anstey, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. Chronica Magistri Rogeri de Houedene. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868–1871.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree; showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work: it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. Willelmi Malmesbiriensis Monachi de Gestis Pontificum Anglorum Libri Quinque. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. Hamilton, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. Historic and Municipal Documents of Ireland, from the Archives of the City of Dublin, &c. 1172–1320. Edited by John T. Gilbert, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland,—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls of names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

54. The Annals of Loch Cé. A Chronicle of Irish Affairs, from 1014 to 1590. Vols. I. and II. Edited, with a Translation, by William Maunsell Hennessy, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1871.

The original of this chronicle has passed under various names. The title of "Annals of Loch Cé" was given to it by Professor O'Curry, on the ground that it was transcribed for Brian Mac Dermot, an Irish chieftain, who resided on an island in Loch-Cé, in the county of Roscommon. It adds much to the materials for the civil and ecclesiastical history of Ireland; and contains many curious references to English and foreign affairs, not noticed in any other chronicle.

55. Monumenta Juridica. The Black Book of the Admiralty, with an Appendix. Vol. I. Edited by Sir Travers Twiss, Q.C., D.C.L., Her Majesty's Advocate-General. 1871.

This Book contains the ancient ordinances and laws relating to the navy, and was probably compiled for the use of the Lord High Admiral of England. Selden calls it the "jewel of the Admiralty Records." Prynne ascribes to the Black Book the same authority in the Admiralty as the Black and Red Books have in the Court of Exchequer, and most English writers on maritime law recognize its importance.

56. Memorials of the Reign of Henry VI.:—Official Correspondence of Thomas Bekynton, Secretary to Henry VI., and Bishop of Bath and Wells. Edited, from a MS. in the Archiepiscopal Library at Lambeth, with an Appendix of Illustrative Documents, by the Rev. George Williams, B.D., Vicar of Ringwood, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Vols. I. and II. 1872.

These curious volumes, which are of a very miscellaneous character, were, in all probability, compiled under the immediate direction of Bekynton, and commenced before he had attained to the dignity of the Episcopate. They contain many of the Bishop's own letters, and several written by him in the King's name. Besides these, there are letters sent to himself while he was the Royal Secretary, as well as others addressed to the King. This work will elucidate some obscure points in the history of the nation during the first half of the fifteenth century.

57. Matthæi Parisiensis, Monachi Sancti Albani, Chronica Majora. Vol. I. The Creation to A.D. 1066. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Registrary of the University, and Vicar of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge. 1872.

This volume contains the first portion of the "Chronica Majora" of Matthew Paris, one of the most valuable and frequently consulted of all the ancient English Chronicles. It is now published for the first time. The editions by Archbishop Parker, and William Wats, severally commence at the Norman Conquest.

58. Memoriale Fratris Walteri de Coventria.—The Historical Collections of Walter of Coventry. Vol. I. Edited, from the MS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, by William Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1872.

This work, now printed in full for the first time, has long been a desideratum by Historical Scholars. The first portion, however, is not of much importance, being only a compilation from earlier writers. The part relating to the first quarter of the thirteenth century is the most valuable and interesting.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., Director. 35 Parts, imperial quarto and demy quarto (1861–1863) boards. Price 4*s.* 6*d.* to 1*l.* 1*s.* each Part, according to size; or, bound in 2 Vols., 18*l.*

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Cnut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor; the present possessor; how many hides were in the manor; how many ploughs were in demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cottars; how many serving men; how many free tenants; how many tenants in soccage; how much wood, meadow, and pasture; the number of mills and fish-ponds; what had been added or taken away from the place; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor; the present value; and how much each free man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward; who then held it; its value in the time of the late king; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly he caused it to be traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendence of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton. The fac-simile was completed in 1863.

*For some reason left unexplained, many parts were left unsurveyed; Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described in the survey; nor does Lancashire appear under its proper name; but Furness, and the northern part of Lancashire, as well as the south of Westmoreland, with a part of Cumberland, are included within the West Riding of Yorkshire. That part of Lancashire which lies between the Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the survey comprehended 688 manors, is joined to Cheshire. Part of Rutland is described in the counties of Northampton and Lincoln.

FAC-SIMILES of NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey. Price, each Part, with translations and notes, double foolscap folio, 16*s*.

Part I. (William the Conqueror to Henry VII.). 1865.
Part II. (Henry VIII. and Edward VI.). 1866.
Part III. (Mary and Elizabeth). 1867.
Part IV. (James I. to Anne). 1868.

The first Part extends from William the Conqueror to Henry VII., and contains autographs of the kings of England, as well as of many other illustrious personages famous in history, and some interesting charters, letters patent, and state papers. The second Part, for the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., consists principally of holograph letters and autographs of kings, princes, statesmen, and other persons of great historical interest, who lived during those reigns. The third Part contains similar documents for the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth, including a signed bill of Lady Jane Grey. The fourth Part concludes the series, and comprises a number of documents taken from the originals belonging to the Constable of the Tower of London; also several records illustrative of the Gunpowder Plot, and a woodcut containing portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and James VI., circulated by their adherents in England, 1580–3.
